

The Innumerable Fleets

Many ships were sent out, hoping to escape their wrath. It was all for naught, of course - the gods have absolute control over the land after all, why not the sea as well? - but in our panic we couldn't help but try anything. Everything, no matter the cost.

All but a few of the ships sank, destroyed by the waves. Looted by whoever could reach them first.

Everything from sacred relics to mundane supplies were taken, and all that remained were what few things had sunk too deep.

Our society has collapsed. Please, if you find this, I beg you - do not follow in our footsteps.